Location descriptions

LEFKAS Lefkas

The main town of the Ionian island Lefkada in the northeast of the island begins almost direct at the drawbridge, which connects Lefkada with the mainland. The center next to the church is very busy with many large cafes, restaurants and bars. Particularly popular with visitors are the small, winding and very colorful streets of the city, in the pedestrian area there are numerous shops for shopping and strolling. Worth seeing is the metal belfry of the Chapel of Agios Nikolaos, which consists of striking metal bracing because of the earthquake endangerment of Lefkas. The most popular restaurants are located on the harbor promenade where countless yachts are anchored.

MEGANISI

The small island (20 km²) Meganisi is only half a mile east of Lefkada. Meganisi is largely spared of mass tourism. Meganisi, is known for its many interesting caves and beautiful beaches. Most places are right on the water, you sit in the cafe, with your own yacht right in front of your feet. The only village Spartochorion is situated over the small port of Porto Spilia and offers its visitors the typical Greek idyll.

ITHAKA

Ithaca, the former home of Odysseus, has many beautiful beaches and anchorages.

- Vathi: The main town of Vathi, which is surrounded by two hills, has one of the largest natural harbors and is located in an almost fjord-like, spacious bay. The various anchorages in Vathi offer a beautiful view of the town and the pier. Vathi is particularly attractive in the second row behind the waterfront between taverns, mini markets, shops and colorful homes. Here, sailors can provide with food or sit comfortably in a cafe or bar or have a good meal. With the dinghy you can also visit the chapel island Lazaretto in the bay.
- Pera Pigadi is one of the most beautiful anchor bays on the southeast side of Ithaca. The uninhabited islet of Pera Pigadi is located in the bay of the same name, separated from a narrow channel. There are several attractive anchorages.

KEFALONIA

Beautiful bays in front of imposing cliffs, secluded mountain landscapes, tranquil villages and ancient monasteries - the Ionian island of Kefalonia is still one of the real insiders' tips among fans of Greece. The island has a breathtaking nature with beautiful beaches, caves and grottos as well as various sights to offer.

- Efimia: In the deep bay of Sami on the east side of Kefalonia lies the port of Efimia. One reason why many crews come to Efimia is a stalactite cave with an underground lake. Through the narrow opening in the ceiling at noon light falls into the vault and lets the lake shine in a deep blue.
- Poros: Poros is a picturesque harbor town surrounded by mountains. Here you will find many bars, fish taverns, restaurants and shops. Outside in Poros at Broutzi you can see old tombs from the Mycenaean period. An important sight, just a few kilometers from Poros, is the Monastery of the Holy Mother of Atros (13th century), located on the top of Mount Atros. It is the oldest monastery of Kefalonia and the view from above, especially at sunrise is beautiful. Due to its impressive underwater world, the idyllic harbor town is also a true paradise for people who like snorkeling.

- Argostoli: In Argostoli, the capital of Kefalonia, life takes place. Along the road „Lithostroto“ the various sights line up. Bright violet flowers lush on the facades. Around the docks picturesquely saffron yellow or blue painted houses alternate with cafes, bars and souvenir shops.
- Assos: is one of the few ways to make a nice stop on the western side of the Ionian Islands, mostly limited to travelers who take a break on the way to Myrtos beach or Fiskardo. But Assos is a real hit, a quaint little Greek port. In Assos there are ruins of an ancient fortress, which can be explored within a 30-minute walk.
- Fiskardo is a traditional fishing village with typical Greek flair. The picturesque little streets are adorned with beautiful flowers hanging from the balconies. Fiskardo is densely overgrown with forests. Especially worth seeing are the old Norman church ruins and the large round lighthouse.
